A quick note about "Ay Dios amparamé" Another in the unbroken string of masterpieces, this includes the great Soy todo, ranked #1 by the readers of Timba.com, terrific Mayito versions of De La Habana a Matanzas and Seis semanas, and the debut of Roberto "Robertón" Hernández who sings Deja la ira and the incredibly great Camina pa' que te conozcan. Manolín fans will recognize Deja la ira and Soy todo as the songs that Robertón and Mayito quote in their famous cameo appearances on Pegaíto pegaíto from De buena fe. -- for more on the Los Van Van discography from the 1990s, click here = www.timba.com/artist_pages/the-1990s

This TIMBA REAL BOOK project is a collection of very accurate and fully detailed, sheet music transcriptions of classic Timba hits. While most competing Latin music charts are lead sheets, which for example only include chord symbols for the piano and bass, these charts have the exact parts of the performances. "This is crucial because many of the accompaniment parts are song-specific hooks rather than the generic formulaic patterns often found in salsa." -- Kevin Moore of TIMBA.com

"The aim of this collection is to break new ground in timba pedagogy. Charts of this kind really don't exist from any other source. They're painstakingly transcribed and notated in full -- not just the horn parts but the bass, both piano tumbaos and comping, and most importantly individual percussion patterns exactly as played on the original recording. Without these specific elements notated either the player is forced to transcribe the parts themselves, or the band is stuck playing a diluted salsa cover of a timba hit. -- Simon Dawkins, notation specialist and multi-instrumentalist

Another important objective of this project is to make accurate sheet music of classic Timba songs significantly more available to the community at large. The reason these songs are not covered as much as salsa tunes is because it takes much more work to transcribe and play them. It just takes greater skill to complete both these actions authentically and with intention.

These sheet music charts are fully licensed and we hope to continue to make them available at a very affordable price to band leaders and professionals worldwide.
